Professional recognition for physiotherapists –
becoming a skilled worker

Network “Integration through Qualification (IQ)”
There is an increasing shortage of physiotherapists in Germany. Organisations providing therapy are having to close as they are unable to find successors. Demand is therefore increasing for employees with a foreign degree.

There has been an increasing shortage of physiotherapists in Germany for more than a decade\(^1\). For the year 2020, for example, the Federal Employment Agency stated that vacancies reported for physiotherapists were unable to be filled for more than six months (191 days). Also, only around one in every two positions can be filled with somebody who is currently not in employment. The chances of finding an adequate position are assessed as high \(^2\). Increased demand for physiotherapists is also anticipated in the years ahead, this is due in part to Germany’s age distribution.

Because the vacant positions cannot be fully taken up by physiotherapists who have studied or completed training in Germany, people who obtained their professional qualification as a physiotherapist abroad are in high demand.

An important source of information is the Recognition Finder. This provides you with the information you need on the recognition of your professional qualification. For example, this will take you to an advice centre and also to the competent authority for your application. This is where those living abroad will also find the Working and Living in Germany Hotline which they can use to seek advice by telephone.

Individuals with foreign professional qualifications already living in Germany can contact the regional IQ advice centres for information about the options for recognition.
How is training and recognition for physiotherapists regulated in Germany?

- Physiotherapist is one of the professions in Germany with a legally protected professional title. This means that state authorisation is required to use the professional title of physiotherapist in Germany and to be allowed to work as one. Those who gained their professional qualification abroad can apply to go through a recognition process with the competent authority to receive authorisation to practise their profession in Germany. The basic requirement for this is training or a degree in the field of physiotherapy. In your home country, the qualification must authorise you to work as a physiotherapist. If substantial differences are identified between your training and the German training, then you must compensate for these accordingly. Further information about this is available on page 7 under “5. Substantial differences”.

The content and duration of training for physiotherapists are defined by the Masseur and Physiotherapy Act (Masseur- und Physiotherapeutengesetz, MPhG). This is divided into a theoretical element and a practical element. The theoretical element of the training focuses, for example, on general and specialist pathology, treatment techniques in physiotherapy, and the methodological application of physiotherapy in specialist medical fields. In the practical element of the training, trainees work independently under the supervision of approved physiotherapists in hospitals, rehabilitation clinics or physiotherapy practices. As part of this, a total of 1,600 working hours must be completed in various specialist medical fields.

- Network IQ provides training in various towns and cities in Germany for foreign physiotherapists. The IQ advice centre is able to help you find the right offer for your professional recognition.

- If your qualification is identified as equivalent to the German training and you meet the other requirements (medical suitability, personal integrity, proof of language skills at level B2), then authorisation to practise is granted.
Is my professional qualification likely to be recognised in Germany?

To be able to work in Germany as a physiotherapist, you must have your foreign higher education qualification recognised. If you completed your qualification in a third country, you will go through the individual recognition procedure. This checks whether your training is equivalent to the German training or whether there are substantial differences. You can find out precisely what recognition involves from the IQ advice centre. Advisers will help you to prepare for the recognition procedure and to begin this. They will inform you about possible adaptation periods or preparation courses for the knowledge test if substantial differences from the German training are specified in your assessment notice. The adaptation period lasts for a maximum of three years and is concluded with a professional discussion on the content learned. The knowledge test relates to the content of the state final examination.

Over 85% of physiotherapists work in the health sector for example in a hospital, a rehabilitation facility or physiotherapy practice. Further job opportunities are available for example in care homes for the elderly or in the social care sector. You may consider working on a self-employed basis. Many physiotherapy practices in Germany are currently looking for a successor.

The staff at the IQ recognition and training advice service are also able to inform you about other opportunities for working as a physiotherapist in related occupations. Alternatively they will recommend appropriate advice centres which will be able to provide you with the information you need.

Since January 2019 to June 2021, IQ recognition advisers provided more than 1,550 advisory sessions on the recognition of professional qualifications obtained abroad by physiotherapists. 168 of those seeking advice have so far taken up an IQ training offer. From the introduction of the recognition act in 2012 through to the end of 2020, 8262 applications for recognition were submitted by foreign physiotherapists. Statistically this is the third highest number of applications after care workers and doctors of medicine. By the end of 2020, 5,610 procedures were completed and of these almost 97% of cases resulted in a positive decision.

Worth knowing: Recognition procedure for physiotherapists

Working as a physiotherapist in Germany is regulated at federal level. This means you need authorisation from the state to practise the profession if you wish to work in Germany as a physiotherapist. Each federal state has its own competent authority to which you are able to submit your application for recognition of your state-recognised qualification. This means you apply in the federal state where you live or in which you want to live after entering Germany. If your training is assessed as equivalent, you can work anywhere in Germany for an unlimited period.
What are the necessary steps for working as a physiotherapist in Germany?

1. Seek advice
   In order to work as a physiotherapist, you need recognition of your professional qualification. The Network IQ advisers will discuss with you how you might gain this recognition. For example, they will help you to find the right recognition centre for your place of residence and occupation.

2. Submit an application
   The Network IQ can help you prepare the documentation to apply for recognition of your qualification as a physiotherapist. As a rule you have to submit, for example, documentation of your work experience and qualifications translated into German and your CV to the recognition centre. The procedure involves a fee. In some cases, the German state may provide financial assistance. IQ is also able to inform you regarding these options for financial support.

3. The recognition authority checks your documents
   The competent recognition authority in your federal state checks your application and determines whether your foreign qualification is equivalent to all parts of the degree/training in Germany. This involves checking whether substantial differences exist between your training and the German physiotherapist training. Once all necessary documents have been submitted, this check must be completed within four months. In certain cases the time period may be extended. The recognition procedure is governed by the training and examination regulation for physiotherapists and by the Masseur and Physiotherapy Act.

4. You receive your assessment notice
   If no substantial differences are identified, the competent authority certifies the equivalence. If you fulfil all further criteria for authorisation to practise the profession, such as knowledge of German at level B2 and medical suitability, you receive authorisation to use the job title of “Physiotherapist” and this places you on an equal legal footing with those who completed the German physiotherapist qualification.
Substantial differences

If substantial differences are identified between your training and the German training, then you must compensate for these in order to receive recognition. The basis for this is also the training and examination regulation for physiotherapists. You can compensate for differences with either an adaptation period which lasts for a maximum of three years or a knowledge test which relates to the content of the state final examination. If you pass the adaptation period or the knowledge test and if you meet the further requirements for the authorisation to practise the profession, you then receive authorisation to use the job title of “Physiotherapist”. Your IQ advice centre can help you find appropriate training to compensate for the identified differences.
Andelina Budimir: “For me, recognition means I'm allowed to practise my dream profession.”

Andelina Budimir works as a physiotherapist at the University Medical Center Hamburg-Eppendorf and loves her profession: “I'm pleased that I'm allowed to work as a physiotherapist in Germany. I have found my dream job.” However getting to this point was not easy. In Croatia, Andelina Budimir trained for four years as a physiotherapist. She then completed a recognition year in a hospital. Yet she felt there were no career opportunities at home. On a visit to Hamburg in 2013 she found out from the Counselling Centre for Recognition of Qualifications (Zentrale Anlaufstelle Anerkennung, ZAA) at the social service organisation “Diakonisches Werk Hamburg” about the possibility of having her foreign professional qualification recognised. A year later she moved to Hamburg, close to her aunt, and initially attended a B1 language course.

With the help of the ZAA, she then applied to the City of Hamburg grant programme. This would cover the costs of a B2 language course. Andelina Budimir needs authorisation to practise her profession in order to work as a physiotherapist. In July 2014 she therefore applied for recognition to the Ministry of Health and Consumer Protection (Behörde für Gesundheit und Verbraucherschutz, BGV). The documentation check identified substantial differences between the Croatian training and the German training. A competency assessment showed Andelina Budimir precisely what was missing from her training. She received the results in an assessment notice in April 2015. This recommended the six-month refresher training for healthcare occupations (APQ) at the Academy for Training and Careers at the University Medical Center Hamburg-Eppendorf (UKE).

This specialist refresher training is a compensation measure for regulated professions. This includes various deployments in clinical areas of the UKE as well as practical teaching and workshops in a clinical setting. Andelina Budimir coped very successfully with the compensation measure. She was supported in this by specialist lecturers, mentors, language teachers and colleagues. “Over this period I learned a lot of specialist German terms. And about how you speak to and deal with doctors and patients. That helped me a lot.”

Andelina Budimir has had full recognition as a physiotherapist since January 2016. She gained a permanent position one month later, first in a physiotherapy practice and then at the University Medical Center. “I was surprised at how long everything took. But the effort was worth it,” she explains happily.

The interview with Andelina Budimir was conducted in January 2018. For the recognition procedure, she was supported during the refresher training by the Ministry of Health and Consumer Protection and two subprojects in the Network IQ Hamburg: the Counselling Centre for Recognition of Qualifications (ZAA) at the social service organisation “Diakonisches Werk Hamburg” and the Academy for Training and Careers at the University Medical Center Hamburg-Eppendorf (UKE).

In Syria, Faisal Hamdo studied physiotherapy at the University of Aleppo and graduated with a diploma. Following this, he worked for two years as a physiotherapist in a practice and in an organisation supporting children with disabilities. He was forced to flee to Germany in June 2014 as the situation became increasingly dangerous for him. He wanted one thing in particular. “I was hoping for a secure future in Germany. I wanted to practise the profession I had trained for in Germany.”

The language was a hurdle. To begin with Faisal Hamdo therefore attended a language course and achieved level B1. He was also having some thoughts about his professional future. Friends advised him to contact the Counselling Centre for Recognition of Qualifications (ZAA) at the social service organisation “Diakonisches Werk Hamburg”. The advice centre is part of the Network IQ Hamburg. Syrian-born Faisal Hamdo then wanted to apply for recognition to the Hamburg Ministry of Health and Consumer Protection. However his first attempt was unsuccessful. This was because he did not have the documents he needed, such as his diploma certificate, for the equivalence assessment. Faisal had some good fortune following unhappy circumstances and received the documents from the University of Aleppo via a more indirect route. Before the war started, Faisal Hamdo happened to have treated a girl in the therapy centre free of charge. This girl’s father now obtained these key documents for him. This time around the application was successful.
He received the recognition notice the very same month. Following this, Faisal Hamdo had to compensate for substantial differences compared to the German training by completing an adaptation period. For this he had to achieve the required B2 language level. First, he completed a language course for healthcare occupations with passage gGmbH in the Network IQ. He also secured himself a place on the six-month refresher training for healthcare occupations (APQ). This course combines practical and theoretical elements. Faisal Hamdo worked in the University Medical Center for four days a week. He also attended instructional sessions and teaching in a clinical setting. One day was generally set aside for workshops. At his final assessment at the end of 2015 he successfully demonstrated his specialist knowledge. Following this, he received full recognition as a physiotherapist. Faisal Hamdo received a monthly grant for the period of the refresher training. The City of Hamburg grant programme also covered the costs of the procedure, the language course and the travel costs.

The 28-year-old found a job very quickly. “In addition to the language course for nursing occupations, I completed a placement in a physiotherapy practice. Following recognition, I was appointed at the practice as a skilled worker. In March 2016 I moved to the University Medical Center Hamburg-Eppendorf.” Here Faisal Hamdo worked as a physiotherapist in the intensive care unit. He is happy. “I now have a permanent contract of employment and therefore security in my life. Recognition makes me feel I’m part of society and that I’m helping to shape this country.”

Faisal Hamdo has written about his experiences in a book: “Fern von Aleppo. Wie ich als Syrer in Deutschland lebe.” [A long way from Aleppo. Living in Germany as a Syrian] This provides an insight into life in Syria. Above all, however, he describes challenges he overcame on his route to recognition.

The conversation with Faisal Hamdo took place in January 2018. For the recognition procedure, he was supported during the refresher training by the Ministry of Health and Consumer Protection and three different subprojects in the Network IQ Hamburg: the Counselling Centre for Recognition of Qualifications (ZAA) at the social service organisation “Diakonisches Werk Hamburg”, passage gGmbH for the language course, and the Academy for Training and Careers at the University Medical Center Hamburg-Eppendorf (UKE).

Refresher training (APQ) in physiotherapy – training offer for foreign physiotherapists in Hamburg

The refresher training in the Network IQ Hamburg is aimed at physiotherapists whose international professional qualification has been recognised as “partially equivalent”. The trainee programme generally lasts for six months and predominantly takes place in practices, therapy centres or in the University Medical Center Hamburg-Eppendorf (UKE). All participants are supported on-site by mentors and teachers. The programme is supplemented by weekly workshops, evaluations of participants’ own therapy settings via video recording and blended learning. The goal is full recognition of professional qualification and for participants to gain qualified employment in the profession they have trained for. The IQ subproject will run until 31/12/2021. Funding will then be provided by the Academy for Training and Careers at the University Medical Center Hamburg-Eppendorf (ABK).

Knowledge test preparation for physiotherapists in Brandenburg

The training in the IQ Network Brandenburg prepares physiotherapists with a foreign qualification for the knowledge test. Passing the test is a requirement for working in Germany as a physiotherapist.

The preparation course can be completed alongside work. It takes a maximum of 10 months. The specialist modules are taught from Thursday to Saturday each week. The modular concept means you can start at any time

Module 1: Basics
Module 2: Movement systems
Module 3: Internal organs
Module 4: Movement development and control
Module 5: Experience and behaviour
Module 6: Practice

The knowledge test takes place at the end. The project is approved until 31 December 2022. The final knowledge test will take place in October 2022.

The preparation course is open to participants from all federal states.

Attending the course is free of charge. Further information is available here: https://www.brandenburg.netzwerk-iq.de/en/our-services/training-and-qualifications-to-work-in-germany
